GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | O I L |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> European shares rose on Wednesday following a strong rally in the previous session, as investors bet on unprecedented stimulus measures to ease the economic pain on businesses and households from the coronavirus pandemic. South Korea's central bank plans to inject dollars into local financial markets next week using a currency swap with the U.S. Federal Reserve to help ease a growing dollar shortage in onshore markets, a senior bank official said. Australian shares jumped 5% on Wednesday, ending just short of the 5,000 mark, fuelled by a bout of last-minute buying after the U.S. government agreed on a massive stimulus package to mitigate the impact of the coronavirus pandemic. The Ifo Business Climate indicator for Germany was revised lower to 86.1 in March 2020, the lowest since July 2009, from a preliminary estimate of 87.7. It was also the steepest monthly fall since German reunification as the Covid-19 outbreak hurts businesses, jobs and overall activity. The Toronto Stock Exchange's S&P/TSX traded higher on Wednesday morning, after recording its biggest one-day gain since at least 1979, as the Canadian legislators agreed to approve a CAD 27 billion stimulus bill after debating for almost a day, in a bid to mitigate the effects of the Covid-19. Stocks of crude oil in the United States increased by 1.623 million barrels in the week ended March 20th 2020, following a 1.954 million rise in the previous week and compared with market expectations of a 2.774 million advance, according to the EIA Petroleum Status Report. New orders for key U.S.-made capital goods fell sharply in February as demand for machinery and other products slumped, suggesting a deepening contraction in business investment that analysts said signaled the economy was already in recession.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The dollar and global equity markets marched higher on Wednesday and were poised for a second day of gains following a coronavirus-induced selloff, though investors remained concerned about the pandemic's economic impact. $2 trillion U.S. fiscal stimulus will ease the economic devastation caused by virus lockdowns lifted world equity indexes for a second day after historic gains on Tuesday, but investors refrained from calling a bottom. Europe's main markets in London, Frankfurt and Paris were struggling to stay positive after ripping 4%-5% higher and oil prices swung from 3% up to 3% down. Wall Street also teetered though it mostly remained more than 1% higher. New orders for key U.S.-made capital goods fell sharply in February as demand for machinery and other products slumped, suggesting a deepening contraction in business investment. The dollar slipped on Wednesday after U.S. politicians agreed a $2 trillion stimulus package that steadied money market nerves and prompted investors to buy back into 'riskier' currencies. European Central Bank chief Christine Lagarde asked euro zone finance ministers during a videoconference on Tuesday to seriously consider a one-off joint debt issue of "coronabonds". Oil prices fell despite the massive pending U.S. economic stimulus package as the coronavirus pandemic hurt U.S. fuel demand, with traders bracing for further declines. In metals markets, gold changed hands at $1,608.78 an ounce, retaining most of Tuesday's gains of almost 5%, its biggest jump since 2008.
FOREX	The dollar weakened against a basket of currencies on Wednesday as a $2 trillion stimulus bill helped boost risk appetite, and reduced demand for the safe haven currency. Stocks surged for a second day as U.S. senators were due to vote on a bipartisan package of legislation to alleviate the devastating economic impact of the coronavirus pandemic, hoping it will become law quickly. Investors are also likely reducing dollar exposure ahead of Thursday's jobless claims data, which is expected to show a surge in Americans filing for benefits as businesses close across the country in an attempt to curb the spread of the virus. New York's governor on Wednesday said there were tentative signs that restrictions were slowing the spread of the coronavirus in his state, even as the public health crisis deepened in hard-hit New Orleans and other parts of the United States. Jobless claims on Thursday are expected to rise to around a million, from 281,000 the previous week, according to the median estimate from a Reuters poll of economists. The dollar index fell 0.81% to 101.87.

	Sterling jumped 1.33% to $1.1913. The euro gained 0.91% versus the greenback to $1.0885. The single currency was also boosted after the German lower house on Wednesday suspended the country's constitutionally enshrined debt brake, approving a massive stimulus package by Chancellor Angela Merkel's government. Germany's economy could contract by as much as 20% this year due to the impact of the coronavirus, an Ifo economist said on Wednesday, as German business morale tumbled to its lowest level since the global financial crisis in 2009. Investors are also continuing to absorb the Federal Reserve's unprecedented announcement on Monday that it would launch unlimited quantitative easing, and how that will impact the greenback.
GOLD	It's probably going to continue rallying in the near term, but gold decided that Wednesday was Dow day. Investors cashed out the yellow metal a day after chasing it to just a whisker shy of $1,700 an ounce on Tuesday in a preliminary run-up to the $2 trillion coronavirus stimulus package agreed between the White House and Congress. Gold futures for April delivery on New York's COMEX settled down $27.40, or 1.6%, at $1,633.40. In Tuesday's post-settlement trade, April gold raced to as high as $1,699.15 after settling up $93.20 at $1,660.80 per ounce. On the previous day, it rose about $83, accounting for a back-to-back rally of more than 11% over just two days. Spot gold, which tracks live trades in bullion, was down $1.52, or 0.1%, at $1,615.23 by 3:36 PM ET (19:36 GMT). The rebound in gold has come less than two weeks after it hit four-month lows of $1,450.90 on March 16.
OIL	The $2 trillion U.S. coronavirus stimulus package may be doing wonders for stocks, but not yet oil. Crude prices rose more modestly on Wednesday despite Wall Street's Dow, which added another 1,000-odd points to yesterday's gain of more than 2,000. Analysts said oil traders were moving cautiously amid the broader risk appetite stirred by the stimulus package agreed between the White House and Congress. "There are two trillion reasons why oil will not go to zero, but we may not be out of the woods yet," said Phil Flynn, analyst at Price Futures Group in Chicago. West Texas Intermediate, the New York-traded benchmark for U.S. crude prices, settled up 48 cents, or 2%, at $24.49 per barrel. Brent, the London-traded global benchmark for crude, settled up 24 cents, or 0.9%, at $27.39. Crude prices are down more than 50% on the year as lockdowns across the world to contain the Covid-19 outbreak brings to a halt virtually all non-essential travel or work. Analysts are warning that an unimaginable wall of crude supply might build in the second quarter, straining global oil storage, which was already at capacity. Complicating the situation in oil is the tussle for greater market share between Saudi Arabia and Russia, who have both moved to hike output and undercut each other on the selling price of crude to boost their respective exports. Analysts have warned that less-competitive U.S. crude exporters might be the biggest losers in the game. U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, in a telephone conversation on Tuesday with Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, the virtual ruler of Saudi Arabia, urged the kingdom to "reassure" oil and financial markets amid global risks from Covid-19, the State Department said. Pompeo placed the call to the crown prince amid mixed feelings his boss — U.S. President Donald Trump — has about the oil market. Trump, who is seeking re-election in November, is happy that the crash in oil prices has slashed gasoline prices at pumps, delivering relief to consumers. But he's also worried about the threat of bankruptcy that such low prices pose to U.S. shale drillers, who helped turn the United States into the world's largest oil producer, averaging 13 million barrels per day, and also putting the country on the road to energy independence.
