U.S. & Global Markets – Sharp gains in the United States drove stocks higher despite a rout in emerging markets, while crude oil prices ended up in a volatile session as oil producers agreed on an extension to their supply cap deal until the end of 2018.

The U.S. dollar fell against the euro and other major currencies except the yen, despite U.S. data that showed a rise in inflation and a decline in initial jobless claims. The data reinforced already strong bets that the Federal Reserve will raise rates next month and several more times in 2018.

Chances of passage of a Senate tax overhaul bill rose with the endorsement of Senator John McCain. U.S. stocks had opened higher as Wednesday's selloff in technology and other high-flying stocks reversed.

The tax bill proposal, expected to reduce corporate taxes, is seen by most analysts as a boon to the stock market.

"It's anticipation of the tax bill getting through, and (the market) took another leg up when McCain said he was not going to oppose it," said Bucky Hellwig, senior vice president at BB&T Wealth Management in Birmingham, Alabama.

"We have seen 'no' votes flipping to the 'yes' column, so that makes the passage of the bill more certain but also moves it up on the calendar. The rush is on right now to get that cranked out, and investors are saying (they're) ready to buy into that," he said.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 331.67 points, or 1.39 percent, to 24,272.35, the S&P 500 gained 21.51 points, or 0.82 percent, to 2,647.58 and the Nasdaq Composite added 49.63 points, or 0.73 percent, to 6,873.97.

The Dow closed above 24,000 for the first time. The S&P and the small-cap Russell 2000 also set record closing highs.

The pan-European FTSEurofirst 300 index lost 0.46 percent and MSCI's gauge of stocks across the globe gained 0.26 percent.

The global equity gauge posted its 13th straight monthly gain – the longest monthly winning streak in the index's 30-year history. The total gain over the 13 months nears 23 percent.

Emerging market stocks lost 1.80 percent, the most for any day in over six months. Brazil's benchmark equities index lost 1.0 percent as traders focused on uneven progress of a pension reform bill seen by some as key to shoring up the nation's finances.

MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan closed 1.56 percent lower.

U.S. Treasury yields rose after the upbeat U.S. data.

Jim Vogel, interest rates strategist at FTN Financial in Memphis, said the market was focused on inflation.

"A lot of people have moved their forecasts to four rate hikes next year, from three. But the people who are skeptical about the four hikes in 2018 and who saw the data this morning may be thinking that is not totally out of bounds," he said.

Benchmark 10-year notes last fell 12/32 in price to yield 2.4168 percent, from 2.376 percent late on Wednesday.

The 30-year bond last fell 11/32 in price to yield 2.8339 percent, from 2.817 percent late on Wednesday.

Yields ended off session highs as some market participants doubted the efficacy of the current tax cut proposal in terms of powering the U.S. economy.

"This (tax bill) doesn't change the fact that whatever economic scenario you saw playing out is still likely what's going to play out," said Aaron Kohli, interest rates strategist at BMO Capital Markets.

GLOBAL ECONOMIES

Australia – Australian business investment hit its highest in over a year last quarter while approvals to build new homes climbed to the strongest in eight months, promising omens for a pick up in broader economic activity.

Investment grew a seasonally adjusted 1 percent in July-September to A$29.4 billion ($22.23 billion), data from the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) showed on Thursday. That was the third straight quarter of gains and the best performance since mid-2016.

Spending on equipment, plant and machinery rose 0.7 percent and should have added modestly to economic growth in the third quarter, with investment outside mining and manufacturing hitting fresh record highs.

Figures due next week are likely to show Australia's A$1.7 trillion gross domestic product (GDP) expanded by anywhere from 0.5 percent to 0.8 percent in the third quarter.

The data gave a boost to the local dollar which was last up 0.3 percent at $0.7590, snapping four straight sessions of losses.

AMP Capital economist Diana Mousina estimated that non-mining investment would climb about 12 percent over the year, a big improvement from 2 percent rise in 2016/17. Mining investment, on the other hand, is seen falling about 20 percent.

"Total business investment growth will likely be close to flat in 2017/18," Mousina added.

"That is a better outcome than three months ago that indicated a small fall in total investment and it would be the best outcome for total business investment for several years."

Latest estimates for business investment in the year to June 2018 were also revised up further to A$108.9 billion, from a previous A$103.1 billion, topping most analysts forecasts.

Spending plans for sectors including utilities, construction and retail trade, were all running at record highs.

New Zealand – Backlash towards the incoming Labour government caused New Zealand business sentiment to plummet to an eight-year low in November, a survey showed on Thursday.

The ANZ Bank survey showed a net 39.3 percent of firms expected the economy to deteriorate over the year ahead, the most pessimistic reading since the height of the Global Financial Crisis in 2009.

The result sent the New Zealand dollar sharply down by 0.3 cents to a one-week low of $0.6833.

"There may well be a political protest-vote element in this month's results," said Sharon Zollner senior economist at ANZ Bank in a research note accompanying the survey.

This was the first ANZ business survey that encompassed a full month of firms' reactions to the new Labour-led government, which took the helm towards the end of October.

The governing leftwing coalition, which includes the nationalist New Zealand First Party, ended almost a decade of centre-right rule by the National Party, which had touted itself as pro-business.

"Businesses are feeling very uncertain about a three party government and the change of government and as a result they may hold off on business investment," said Dominick Stephens, chief economist at Westpac Bank, adding that could cause a slowdown in economic growth in the coming year.

Economists said Labour's plans to curb demand in the already slowing housing market was likely a major factor in the gloomy outlook.

"The government is going to take a range of actions, which will cool the housing market and a slower housing market in New Zealand leads to less consumer spending," said Stephens.

Labour has vowed to introduce a law this year that will ban non-resident foreigners from buying existing homes and has said it will ramp up taxes on gains from investment properties next year.

New Zealand's house prices had been racing ahead in the double digits at the start of the year, but growth has since eased to around 3 percent.

Prices are even falling in the country's largest city of Auckland and the slowdown had prompted the central bank on Wednesday to ease back some of its mortgage lending restrictions that were behind the fall.

The outlook for firms' own activity in the ANZ survey also fell, though not to such an extreme degree. A net 6.5 percent of respondents expected their own businesses to grow in the next 12 months, down from 22.2 percent last month.

Euro Zone – Euro zone inflation rose less than expected in November, indicating that price growth remains weak and reinforcing European Central Bank expectations for a dip around the turn of the year.

Inflation in the 19 countries sharing the euro rose to 1.5 percent in November from 1.4 percent a month earlier, missing expectations for 1.6 percent, despite a surge in oil price that increased energy costs, data from Eurostat showed on Thursday.

The ECB targets inflation at just below 2 percent but has missed this objective for nearly five years as the euro zone is still just emerging from its deepest economic crisis in generations with over 14 million people still out of work.

To revive growth, the ECB has used its entire arsenal. It has cut rates into negative territory, given banks nearly unlimited access to cheap funding, and bought over 2 trillion euros worth of bonds to depress borrowing costs.

The work has paid off. Seven million jobs have been created and growth is now into its fifth year with weaker countries finally enjoying many of the benefits.

But inflation is still expected to head below 1 percent in the coming months as favourable figures from a year earlier get knocked from the data series and price growth will only head back over 1.5 percent in 2019, ECB projections show.

Greece – Greek retail sales by volume declined 0.8 percent in September compared to the same month a year ago after an upwardly revised 0.8 percent increase in August, statistics service ELSTAT said on Thursday.

Retail sales were led lower by fuels, lubricants, pharmaceutical products, tobacco, foods and beverages, the data showed.

Greece's economy expanded for a second straight quarter between April and June, driven by gains in exports and higher government spending. Gross domestic product expanded 0.5 percent in the second quarter from the first.

The government expects the economy to grow by about 1.6 percent this year.

U.S. – The Republican drive to push sweeping tax legislation through the U.S. Senate was hurtling on Thursday toward a dramatic conclusion, as Republican leaders pursued behind-the-scenes deals intended to secure enough votes for passage.

After an official 20 hours of debate, the Republican-controlled Senate was expected to begin a potentially chaotic "vote-a-rama" on amendments from Republicans and Democrats before moving to a final vote late on Thursday or early on Friday.

U.S. financial markets have rallied on optimism that the measure could pass, a sentiment shared by outside conservative groups that hope to see the first major overhaul of the U.S. tax code since 1986, when Republican Ronald Reagan was president.

"It's the most unified effort I've seen on any issue in many years," said Tim Phillips, president of Americans for Prosperity, a group aligned with billionaire industrialists Charles and David Koch.

A Republican push to overturn Obamacare ended in an humiliating failure in the Senate earlier this year, and President Donald Trump and his Republican allies have since been under mounting pressure to enact a package of tax cuts for businesses and individuals before January, giving them their first major legislative victory.

Republicans acknowledge that failure to pass a tax bill could jeopardize their control of the Senate and House of Representatives in next year's congressional elections.

Democrats say the Republican tax plan is a giveaway to corporations and the wealthy at the expense of working Americans.

The House approved its own tax bill on Nov. 16. If passed this week, the Senate legislation would need to be reconciled with the House version before a final bill could be sent to Trump.

As an initial action on Thursday, Senate Republicans were expected to take a procedural vote that would formally replace the House bill with their own legislation.

While campaign donors are strongly behind the push for tax cuts, the American public is sharply divided.

Among Americans aware of the Republican tax plan, 49 percent said they were opposed, up from 41 percent in October, according to a Nov. 23-27 Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Wednesday. The latest online poll of 1,257 adults found 29 percent supporting the plan and 22 percent saying they "don't know."

ASIAN STOCK INDICATORS – Daily Outlook

Japan's Nikkei share average rose to a three-week high on Thursday as gains by financial stocks offset weakness in tech shares following a drop by their U.S. counterparts overnight. The Nikkei, which was down part of the day, ended 0.6 percent higher at 22,724.96. The broader Topix advanced 0.3 percent to 1,792.08. Trading was heavy, with 2.4 billion shares changing hands, the most in three weeks. Turnover also hit a three-week high of 4.5 trillion yen ($40.12 billion). Hopes that the Bank Of Japan may buy exchange-traded funds helped sentiment, traders said. Banking shares gained, with Mitsubishi UFJ Financial Group and Mizuho Financial Group both adding 1.6 percent. Nomura Holdings soared 3.0 percent and Daiwa Securities Group advanced 1.4 percent. Semiconductor equipment manufacturer Tokyo Electron Ltd slipped 1.1 percent, electronics products maker Panasonic Corp shed 1.3 percent and Hitachi Ltd declined 1.0 percent. Overnight, the Nasdaq posted its biggest one-day drop in more than three months as investors fled high-flying technology stocks and shifted to banks.

The South Korean won extended losses late on Thursday, as investors dialled back forecasts for more immediate domestic interest rate rises following the central bank's first policy tightening in six years. The Bank of Korea (BOK) raised interest rates, as expected, on Thursday but tempered market expectations for more by raising concerns about the job market and other uncertainties. South Korean shares also slumped to six-week lows, but were more affected by a slide in tech sector shares following big losses by their U.S. counterparts overnight. The won was quoted at 1,088.2 to the dollar at the conclusion of onshore trade, down 1.1 percent compared with Wednesday's close of 1,076.8. The currency reached as low as 1,090.2 during the session. "The won has marked strong gains recently, pricing in expectations for a rate hike. Now that the market players see the BOK will be very cautious for a next hike, the won is making a correction," said Jung Sung-yoon, a foreign exchange analyst at Hyundai Futures. Over November, the won gained 3.0 percent, its biggest monthly rise since January. The Korea Composite Stock Price Index (KOSPI) closed down 1.5 percent at 2,476.37 points, the lowest closing level since Oct. 19. The KOSPI has lost 1.9 percent on a monthly basis, its largest monthly drop in 10 months. Tech giant Samsung Electronics lost 3.4 percent and SK Hynix fell 6.8 percent, dragging the overall tech sector down 3.7 percent. Foreign investors were net sellers of local equities, offloading a 592.1 billion won ($544.99 million) worth on Thursday.

Hong Kong shares ended Thursday lower, dragged by tech shares and reflecting fears in the region that the boom in demand for electronic components has peaked. At the close of trade, the Hang Seng index was down 446.48 points or 1.51 percent at 29,177.35. The Hang Seng China Enterprises index fell 1.48 percent to 11,475.72. The sub-index of the Hang Seng that tracks energy shares dipped 1.1 percent while the IT sector dipped 3.19 percent, the financial sector was 1.49 percent lower and property sector dipped 0.12 percent. The top gainer on Hang Seng was Bank of East Asia Ltd, up 1.79 percent, while the biggest loser was AAC Technologies Holdings Inc which was down 5.70 percent. China's main Shanghai Composite index closed down 0.61 percent at 3,317.577 points while its blue-chip CSI300 index ended down 1.16 percent. Around the region, MSCI's Asia ex-Japan stock index was weaker by 1.44 percent while Japan's Nikkei index closed up 0.57 percent. The yuan was quoted at 6.6085 per U.S. dollar at 08:14 GMT, 0.17 percent firmer than the previous close of 6.62. So far this year, the Hang Seng index is up 34.65 percent, while China's H-share index is up 24.0 percent. The Hang Seng has risen 4.88 percent this month. The top gainers among H-shares were China Railway Construction Corp Ltd up

2.21 percent, followed by China Citic Bank Corp Ltd gaining 0.6 percent and China Communications Construction Co Ltd up by 0.57 percent. The three biggest H-shares percentage decliners were China Vanke Co Ltd which was down 4.02 percent, China Pacific Insurance Group Co Ltd which fell 4.0 percent and New China Life Insurance Co Ltd down by 3.6 percent. About 2.51 billion Hang Seng index shares were traded, roughly 130.2 percent of the market's 30-day moving average of 1.93 billion shares a day. The volume traded in the previous trading session was 1.48 billion. At close, China's A-shares were trading at a premium of 31.50 percent over the Hong Kong-listed H-shares. The price-to-earnings ratio of the Hang Seng index was 13.56 as of the last full trading day while the dividend yield was 2.9 percent.

China stocks fell on Thursday, pressured by selling of real estate and financial shares, as investors booked profits in sector leaders that had stellar gains this year. At the close, the Shanghai Composite index was down 20.28 points or 0.61 percent at 3,317.58. The blue-chip CSI300 index was down 1.16 percent, with the financial sector sub-index lower by 1.53 percent, the consumer staples sector down 1.11 percent, the real estate index down 4.21 percent and healthcare sub-index down 0.57 percent. The smaller Shenzhen index ended down 0.9 percent and the start-up board ChiNext Composite index was weaker by 0.96 percent. Around the region, MSCI's Asia ex-Japan stock index was weaker by 1.34 percent while Japan's Nikkei index closed up 0.57 percent. At 0706 GMT, the yuan was quoted at 6.6077 per U.S. dollar, 0.19 percent firmer than the previous close of 6.62. The largest percentage gainers in the main Shanghai Composite index were Zhangjiagang Free Trade Science & Technology Group Co Ltd up 10.05 percent, followed by JiLin Sino-Microelectronics Co Ltd gaining 10.03 percent and Lawton Development Co Ltd up by 10.02 percent. The largest percentage losses in the Shanghai index were LONGi Green Energy Technology Co Ltd down 10 percent, followed by Tongwei Co Ltd losing 8.05 percent and Pci-Suntek Technology Co Ltd down by 7.51 percent. So far this year, the Shanghai stock index is up 7.55 percent and the CSI300 is up 21 percent while China's H-share index listed in Hong Kong is up 24.0 percent. Shanghai stocks have declined 1.63 percent this month. About 15.66 billion shares were traded on the Shanghai exchange, roughly 90.0 percent of the market's 30-day moving average of 17.40 billion shares a day. The volume in the previous trading session was 18.38 billion. As of 0706 GMT, China's A-shares were trading at a premium of 31.34 percent over the Hong Kong-listed H-shares. The price-to-earnings ratio of the Shanghai index was 14.92 as of the last full trading day while the dividend yield was 1.9 percent. \(Source Reuters, Research: rizal\)

CURRENCIES – Daily Outlook

Dollar slips against euro on month-end moves, gains on yen - Reuters News

The dollar slipped to a four-day low against the euro on Thursday, hurt by selling pressure due to month-end adjustments, but rallied against the Japanese yen as U.S. Treasury yields rose on optimism about U.S. tax overhaul efforts.

The euro was 0.42 percent higher against the greenback to $1.1897, after climbing as high as $1.1931.

"The dollar is fading on month-end flows," Greg Anderson, global head of FX strategy at BMO

Capital Markets in New York.

Market participants adjusting currency hedges for their portfolios were likely exerting selling pressure on the greenback, he said.

Against the Japanese yen, the dollar was 0.6 percent higher at 112.59 yen. Eric Vilorio, currency strategist at Wells Fargo Securities in New York, attributed the greenback's strength to buoyant U.S. Treasury yields.

"The 10-year Treasury yield is up today while Japanese 10-year government bond yield is up less than that, so the spread is moving in the more favorable direction for the U.S. dollar," Vilorio said.

U.S. Treasury yields rose sharply on news that Senator John McCain had endorsed the U.S. Senate tax bill, potentially easing challenges to its eventual passage in Congress.

"Expectations that the Senate will pass its version of the tax bill later today has given Treasuries a boost," said Paresh Upadhyaya, director of currency strategy at Amundi Pioneer Investment Management in Boston.

Data on Thursday reaffirmed expectations for another Federal Reserve interest rate hike in December.

The number of Americans filing for unemployment benefits fell for a second straight week as labor market conditions tightened further.

U.S. consumer spending slowed in October, however, as the hurricane-related boost to vehicle purchases faded.

Underlying price pressures pushed higher for a second straight month, suggesting a recent disinflationary trend has run its course and bolstering expectations that the Fed will raise rates next month.

The dollar index, which measures the greenback against six rival currencies, was down 0.11 percent at 93.06.

The British pound strengthened on hopes Britain is close to a deal with the European Union over the Northern Ireland border.

The EU has named the border as one of three issues on which "sufficient progress" must be made before talks can move to negotiations on Britain's future trade relationship with the bloc.

Sterling was up 0.86 percent at $1.3521.

Precious Metal – Daily Outlook

Gold dips 1 percent as strong global markets weigh - Reuters News

Gold dropped 1 percent on Thursday as upbeat sentiment on equities and positive U.S. growth data dented the appeal of the safe-haven asset, though the metal was still stuck in its narrowest monthly range in 12 years.

Silver dipped to an eight-week low, falling in tandem with other industrial metals, traders said.

The U.S. dollar, in which gold is priced, held firm after U.S. jobless and consumer spending data, taking support from Wednesday's uplift on third-quarter U.S. economic growth.

Spot gold was down 0.7 percent at $1,274.51 an ounce by 1:53 p.m. EST (1853 GMT), having earlier hit its lowest since Nov. 14 at $1,270.11.

The price is up 0.3 percent this month, though it has been stuck between $1,265 and $1,300 throughout November.

U.S. gold futures settled down $8.90, or 0.7 percent, at $1,273.20 per ounce, closing the month up 0.2 percent.

Silver dropped to $16.30 an ounce, its lowest since Oct. 6 and was last down 0.7 percent at $16.41, headed for a 1.7 percent drop over last month.

"Silver is being sold off as part of the industrial complex," said John Lawrence, senior metals trader for Heraeus Precious Metals in New York.

Global equities were on course to finish November with a 13th consecutive monthly gain, though a dive in U.S. technology stocks left investors wondering whether the longest global equity bull run in living memory might be starting to splutter.

"Optimism (in equities) is at record highs, so it should come off a bit, which would be reasonably positive for gold. But the stronger dollar will cap any gains that come on the back of (that)," said Martin Arnold, strategist at ETF Securities.

Early in the session a stronger U.S. dollar weighed on gold, but the greenback reversed as investors added bets that the U.S. central bank will continue to unwind its stimulus plan, helping gold to move off its lows.

The U.S. economy's growth will warrant continued interest rate increases amid a strengthened global recovery, outgoing U.S. Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen said on Wednesday.

Bullion is highly sensitive to rising U.S. interest rates, which increase the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding gold.

Palladium fell 0.4 percent to $1,009.50, but headed for a 3 percent monthly rise. Platinum was up 0.6 percent at $941.80 an ounce, also poised for a 3 percent rise for the month.

OIL – Daily Outlook

Oil rises as OPEC extends cuts to end of 2018 - Reuters News

Oil rose on Thursday after OPEC and non-OPEC producers led by Russia agreed to extend output cuts until the end of 2018, while also signalling a possible early exit from the deal if the market overheats.

Iran's energy minister announced Nigeria and Libya would be included in the oil output deal and an OPEC communique stated the countries would not produce above 2017 levels in the new year.

The Oman minister said that Nigeria had agreed to cap output at 1.8 million barrels per day (bpd).

The current deal from the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and other producers such as Russia cuts 1.8 million bpd from the market in an attempt to tackle global oversupply and bolster prices.

The deal had been set to expire in March, but on Thursday the Saudi Energy Minister Khalid al-Falih told reporters the cuts would continue for an additional nine months.

"OPEC extending the output cut till the end of 2018 was widely anticipated; however, suggestions that both Nigeria and Libya have decided to cap production is a bullish signal," said Abhishek Kumar, senior energy analyst at Interfax Energy's Global Gas Analytics.

However, price reactions were mostly muted, with many analysts saying the nine-month extension was already priced in.

"Because they're going to be meeting again in a few months, we're just going to be doing this again," said John Macaluso, an analyst at Tyche Capital Advisors.

Brent crude futures settled up 46 cents or 0.7 percent to $63.57 a barrel. U.S. crude futures settled up 10 cents or 0.2 percent to $57.40 a barrel.

Brent rose 3.5 percent on the month, with U.S. crude rising 5.5 percent.

The most active February Brent contract which expired on Thursday, settled up 10 cents to $62.63.

The Brent/WTI spread widened by 49 cents.

Saudi oil minister Khalid al-Falih said it was premature to talk about exiting the cuts at least for a couple of quarters as the world was entering a season of low winter demand. He added OPEC would examine progress at its next regular meeting in June.

"It's not surprising that they gave themselves an out," said Rob Haworth, senior investment strategist at U.S. Bank Wealth Management, referring to the June meeting and review.

He said the important question is country-level compliance. "I think that's where market attention will focus, because you're trying to get a market into balance," Haworth said.

Market watchers said they would look closely at output from countries like Iran, Libya and Russia.

"It will be hard to keep the Russian oil companies in the fold, if shale producers continue to make increased sales to Asia as well," said John Kilduff, partner at Again Capital.

Russia's Energy Minister Alexander Novak said he sees his country's production flat at 547 million tonnes in 2018 if the output cuts are maintained for the whole year.

One of OPEC's biggest problems while cutting supplies has been rising U.S. output, which is gaining global market share and undermining the group's efforts to tighten the market.

U.S. oil production hit a new record of 9.68 million bpd last week, according to government data released on Wednesday.

That is up from 8.5 million bpd at the end of last year, before the cuts were implemented.

"If producers in the U.S. increase their rig count over the next few months due to higher prices then I expect another price collapse by the end of 2018," said Scott Sheffield, executive chairman of Pioneer Natural Resources, one of the largest producers in the Permian, the biggest U.S. oilfield.
