GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The United States and China may be in the final weeks of discussions to hammer out a deal to ease their tit-for-tat tariffs dispute, U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said on Tuesday. • A future euro zone budget should support structural reforms and investment in euro zone countries with grants and loans, the chairman of euro zone finance ministers Mario Centeno said on Monday, summing up discussions among European Union ministers. • Britain's economy picked up in January after a weak December but the bigger picture remained one of growth stuck in low gear ahead of Brexit, official data showed. • Britain's parliament rejected Prime Minister Theresa May's deal to quit the European Union for a second time on Tuesday, deepening the country's worst political crisis for generations, 17 days before the planned departure date. Lawmakers voted against May's amended Brexit deal by 391 to 242 as her last-minute talks with EU chiefs on Monday to assuage her critics' concerns ultimately proved fruitless. The vote puts the world's fifth largest economy in uncharted territory with no obvious way forward: exiting the EU without a deal, delaying the March 29 divorce date, a snap election, or even another referendum are all now possible. • U.S. consumer prices rose for the first time in four months in February, but the pace of the increase was modest, resulting in the smallest annual gain in nearly 2-1/2 years.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A gauge of world equity markets rose and the dollar eased on Tuesday after a tame reading on U.S. inflation reinforced expectations the Federal Reserve will not raise interest rates anytime soon, while Boeing shares slid for a second day. • U.S. consumer prices rose for the first time in four months in February but the modest pace of the increase resulted in the smallest annual gain in inflation in nearly 2-1/2 years. In the 12 months through February, the CPI rose 1.5 percent, well under the Fed's target of 2 percent, leading the dollar to slip against the euro and the dollar index of leading U.S. trading partners' currencies to fall. • Britain's parliament late Tuesday rejected Prime Minister Theresa May's deal to quit the EU for a second time, deepening the country's worst political crisis in generations, a scant 17 days before the planned departure date.
FOREX	Sterling whipsawed after Prime Minister Theresa May's Brexit deal was defeated in Parliament on Tuesday, leaving the currency unchanged on the day, while the dollar fell against the euro as U.S. consumer prices disappointed. The British Parliament rejected May's deal to quit the European Union for a second time, deepening the country's worst political crisis for generations, 17 days before the planned departure date. Sterling was about half a percent weaker at $1.307 after trading in a wide range over the course of the day. There is no obvious way forward for Britain: exiting the EU without a deal, delaying the March 29 divorce date, a snap election, or even another referendum are all now possible. May might try a third time to get parliamentary support in the hope that hardline euroskeptic lawmakers in her Conservative Party might change their minds if it becomes a choice between her withdrawal plan or Britain's remaining in the EU. Also on Tuesday, the dollar was weaker against the euro after U.S. consumer price data showed that inflation remains low despite a tight labor market, bolstering the likelihood the Federal Reserve would keep interest rates unchanged. The U.S. consumer price index rose for the first time in four months in February, but the pace of the increase was modest, resulting in the smallest annual gain in nearly 2-1/2 years. The dollar index, which measures the greenback against a basket of six rivals, fell and was last down 0.29 percent at 96.932 The euro strengthened against the dollar, last trading at $1.1297 up 0.44 percent. Against the Japanese yen, the dollar was 0.09 percent stronger at 111.29 yen, paring earlier gains.

GOLD

Gold gained on Tuesday as the dollar slipped after tame U.S. inflation data supported the Federal Reserve's 'patient' stance on interest rate hikes, while investors awaited a key Brexit vote later in the day.

Spot gold rose 0.4 percent to $1,298.63 per ounce as of 2:09 p.m. EDT (1809 GMT), while U.S. gold futures settled 0.5 percent higher at $1,297.70.

U.S. consumer prices rose for the first time in four months in February. However, the annual gain was the smallest in about 2-1/2 years, showing inflation remained low.

The dollar fell compared with major currencies following the data, bolstering appeal for bullion. Lower interest rates reduce the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding bullion and weigh on the dollar.

Investors would now be keeping a close eye on a vote on the Brexit deal around 3 p.m. EDT, with Prime Minister Theresa May's newly won assurances on her divorce deal failing to win over the main Brexit faction in her Conservative Party.

Reflecting investor sentiment, holdings in the SPDR Gold Trust, the world's largest gold-backed exchange-traded fund, rose 0.4 percent to 769.53 tonnes on Monday.

Gold is facing stiff resistance at the $1,300 mark, having failed to significantly break above the key psychological ceiling, despite recent momentum on the back of the dollar's declines fuelled by weak U.S. jobs data and modest retail sales in January.

Among other precious metals, palladium was up 0.3 percent at $1,540.01 per ounce, while platinum gained 1.2 percent to $834.55. Silver advanced 0.6 percent to $15.41 per ounce, after touching its highest since March 1 earlier in the session.

OIL

Oil prices edged higher on Tuesday, supported by signs of tightening global supply after a Saudi official said the kingdom plans to cut oil exports in April, while the U.S. government reduced its forecast for domestic crude output growth.

Saudi Arabia, seeking to drain a supply glut and support prices, plans to cut its crude oil exports next month to below 7 million barrels per day (bpd), while keeping its output well below 10 million bpd, a Saudi official said on Monday.

Brent crude futures rose 9 cents, or 0.1 percent, to settle at $66.67 a barrel. U.S. West Texas Intermediate (WTI) crude futures rose 8 cents, or 0.1 percent, to settle at $56.87 a barrel.

Since the beginning of the year, both benchmarks have risen around 25 percent.

Crude has been supported since the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and its allies, including Russia, returned to supply cuts as of Jan. 1. The group, known as OPEC+, agreed to reduce supply by 1.2 million bpd for six months.

Saudi Arabia has voluntarily cut its supply by more than the deal requires and in April will keep output "well below" 10 million bpd, the Saudi official said - less than the 10.311 million bpd the kingdom had agreed to pump.

On Sunday, Saudi oil minister Khalid al-Falih said it would be too early to change OPEC+ output policy at the group's meeting in April.

The United Arab Emirates in February exceeded its OPEC target for oil output cuts, achieving 119 percent of its goal, the country's energy minister said on Tuesday at an energy conference. A host of involuntary supply curbs in OPEC members, caused by unrest in Libya and U.S. sanctions on Iran and Venezuela, have also boosted prices.

In addition, Venezuela's state-run oil firm PDVSA has been unable to resume crude exports from its primary port since a power outage last week, people familiar with the matter said on Monday.

In the United States, domestic crude production is expected to grow more slowly than previously anticipated in 2019, averaging about 12.3 million bpd, the U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) said.

However, the EIA cut its 2019 world oil demand growth forecast by 40,000 bpd to 1.45 million bpd. U.S. crude inventories fell by 2.6 million barrels in the week to March 8 to 449 million, the American Petroleum Institute industry group said on Tuesday. Analysts had expected an increase of 2.7 million barrels. The official U.S. government report on crude stockpiles will be released on Wednesday.
