GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • New Zealand's central bank unexpectedly said its next move in interest rates was more likely to be a cut, abandoning its neutral stance at a policy review on Wednesday and knocking the currency down sharply to two-week lows. • Canada's trade deficit shrank slightly to C$4.25 billion ($3.17 billion) in January, the second highest on record, as low crude prices continued to eat into the value of exports, Statistics Canada said on Wednesday. • The European Central Bank could further delay an interest rate hike and may look at measures to mitigate the side-effects of negative interest rates, ECB President Mario Draghi said on Wednesday, warning that risks to growth were on the rise. • British retail sales fell by their most in 17 months in March, reflecting concern among shoppers about Britain's unresolved Brexit impasse, a leading employers group said on Wednesday. • China's industrial firms posted their worst slump in profits since late 2011 in the first two months of this year, data showed on Wednesday, as increasing strains on the economy in the face of slowing demand at home and abroad took a toll on businesses. • The U.S. trade deficit narrowed by the most in 10 months in January as automotive exports rose and China likely boosted purchases of soybeans, driving the first increase in exports in four months and offering a respite to a flood of dour data on the economy. • British Prime Minister Theresa May said on Wednesday she would quit if her twice-defeated EU divorce deal passes at the third attempt, making a last-ditch bid to persuade rebels in her Conservative party to back her. May told a meeting of Conservative lawmakers she would stand down if her divorce plan finally got through a bitterly-divided parliament, to ensure a smooth path for a new leader to begin the next step of negotiating the future relationship with the European Union.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Benchmark U.S. Treasury yields sank to fresh 15-month lows on Wednesday and German bond yields fell further below zero after more dovish talk from central banks, while a gauge of world stocks fell amid new signs of concern for the global economy. • China's industrial firms posted their worst slump in profits since late 2011 in the first two months of this year, data showed. • Meanwhile, European Central Bank President Mario Draghi said the ECB could further delay an interest rate hike and may look at measures to mitigate the side-effects of negative interest rates, warning that risks to growth were on the rise.
FOREX	New Zealand's dollar tumbled on Wednesday, the worst fall against the greenback in seven weeks, after its central bank flagged a possible cut in interest rates, becoming the latest to turn dovish in the face of slowing global growth. The Reserve Bank of New Zealand (RBNZ) unexpectedly said its next move in interest rates was more likely to be a cut, abandoning its neutral stance at a policy review on Wednesday. A slowing global economy and abrupt end to U.S. Federal Reserve policy tightening have shifted rate-cut expectations in Asia to probable from possible. The kiwi was 1.46 percent lower at $0.6804 and the Australian dollar followed suit, falling 0.67 percent. The Fed abruptly ended three years of monetary policy tightening last week amid signs of an economic slowdown. The European Central Bank, Reserve Bank of Australia and the Bank of Japan have all turned dovish since. The euro zone is facing a more persistent deterioration of external demand, and the ECB stands ready to further delay a planned interest rate hike if necessary, President Mario Draghi said on Wednesday. The euro was 0.04 percent lower against the greenback. Elsewhere, major currency markets were quiet as risk appetite remained fragile following a selloff last week triggered by fears of slowing global growth. Informing views on global growth later this week and early next, will be the publication of purchasing managers' index data from the United States, China and the European Union. The U.S. data will be released

GOLD	Friday, the EU's on Monday and China's on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Palladium prices plummeted around 7 percent on Wednesday, the biggest daily percentage drop in more than two years, as investors worried that prices had risen too far too fast and breaks below technical levels triggered automatic selling. Palladium, used to curb harmful emissions from vehicle engines, had almost doubled to a record high of $1,620.52 an ounce last week from $832 in August last year. But it was down 6.7 percent at $1,444.51 an ounce at 2:13 pm est (1813 GMT), its second day of steep losses and the biggest plunge since January 2017. The price fall gained momentum as palladium broke below technical levels, triggering automated selling, a trader said. Palladium fell out of a steep upward trend channel and below its 50-day moving average for the first time since August. Some analysts had warned that prices could not sustain their high levels, particularly as auto sales have weakened in key markets including Europe and China, meaning car makers may need less metal. Concerns over the health of the global economy pushed down world stock markets on Wednesday. The gloomy economic outlook offered only limited support to gold, traditionally seen as a safe investment in times of uncertainty, which dipped 0.4 percent to $1,310.56 an ounce. A stronger dollar helped push prices lower by making bullion more expensive for non-U.S. buyers. Gold had on Monday risen to $1,324.32, the highest in more than three weeks. U.S. gold futures settled down 0.3 percent at $1,310.4 per ounce. Investors were looking ahead to the latest round of China-U.S. trade negotiations in Beijing on Thursday, as well as a fraught week for the UK as Prime Minister Theresa May attempts to push through her twice-rejected Brexit deal. Silver was down 0.9 percent at $15.29 an ounce and platinum was 0.1 percent lower at $854 an ounce.
OIL	Oil prices slumped on Wednesday after government data showed U.S. crude inventories grew more than expected last week as a Texas chemical spill hampered exports. Brent crude futures settled at $67.83 a barrel, down 14 cents or 0.2 percent. U.S. crude futures settled at $59.41 a barrel, falling 53 cents or 0.9 percent. U.S. crude inventories rose last week by 2.8 million barrels, compared with analysts' expectations for a decrease of 1.2 million barrels, the U.S. Energy Information Administration said. Crude exports fell by 506,000 barrels per day, the EIA said. A petrochemical tank fire and chemical spill last week along the Houston Ship Channel hampered crude shipments for several days, prompting Texas officials on Tuesday to sue the owners of the storage facility. Disruptions to Venezuelan exports helped to limit oil price losses. On top of U.S. sanctions in January which banned U.S. refiners from buying Venezuelan oil, the OPEC member's main oil export port of Jose and its four crude upgraders were unable to resume operations following a widespread three-day power blackout. The outage is the second in a month. Oil prices have rebounded roughly 30 percent from 2018 lows, supported by supply curbs by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and other major producers, along with U.S. sanctions on exports from Venezuela and Iran. Oil output from Russia, OPEC's biggest non-member ally, averaged 11.3 million barrels per day so far in March, sources said, compared with 11.34 million barrels each day the previous month. Russia's energy minister, Alexander Novak, said earlier in March that the country planned to speed up oil output cuts. Hedge funds and other money managers have increased bets that demand for oil will be sustained, even as the market rallied last week.
