GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | OIL |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Japanese companies' expectations for inflation over the next year stagnated, a Bank of Japan survey showed on Tuesday, underlining the daunting challenge facing policymakers as they seek to boost growth and prices amid slowing global demand.</li> <li>• China's central bank is expected to cut banks' cash reserve requirements again soon to bolster financial system liquidity as it looks to support the slowing economy, analysts said, as market speculation over another policy move grows.</li> <li>• Australia's central bank held interest rates steady on Tuesday and again highlighted the strength of employment, showing no immediate inclination to echo the outright dovish tone of some of its global peers.</li> <li>• New Zealand business confidence fell in the first quarter, an economic think tank said on Tuesday, pointing to softer growth in the first half of the year and consolidating expectations of an interest rate cut.</li> <li>• Euro zone producer prices rose as expected in February, driven mainly by a jump in energy costs, data from the European Union's statistics office Eurostat showed on Tuesday.</li> <li>• Prime Minister Theresa May said on Tuesday she would ask the European Union for a further delay to Brexit beyond April 12 to give her time to sit down with the opposition Labour Party in a bid to break the impasse over Britain's departure.</li> <li>• British construction activity slowed slightly for the second month in a row in March, as businesses continued to postpone major building projects due to Brexit uncertainty, an industry survey showed on Tuesday.</li> <li>• New orders for key U.S.-made capital goods slipped in February and shipments were unchanged, but data for January was revised slightly higher, which could support views that the manufacturing sector was stabilizing.</li> <li>• World trade shrank by 0.3 percent in the fourth quarter of 2018 and is likely to grow by 2.6 percent this year, slower than 3.0 percent growth in 2018 and below a previous forecast of 3.7 percent, the World Trade Organization said on Tuesday.</li> </ul>
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• World stock markets were little changed on Tuesday but still managed to touch a six-month high as investors took a breather following a three-day run of gains while the possibility of tightening supply kept oil prices on the rise .</li> <li>• MSCI's key gauge of global equities had rallied 1.1% on Monday, its best performance in three weeks, as manufacturing data in China and the United States put recession worries at bay. On Tuesday, the index held close to the unchanged mark for most of the session.</li> </ul>
FOREX	Sterling gained and the euro pared losses, but remained lower on the day, after British Prime Minister Theresa May said on Tuesday that she would ask the European Union for a further delay to Brexit. May is seeking a delay beyond April 12 to give her time to sit down with the opposition Labour Party in a bid to break the impasse over Britain's departure. The pound rallied as much as 0.4% after May's statement, to trade above the $1.31 line. Previously, it was heading towards the $1.30 levels. The euro jumped to a U.S. session high of $1.1215 before giving up much of the gains and remaining lower on the day. The euro has dropped to more than three week lows against the U.S. dollar as investors evaluate international growth prospects with the U.S. and European central banks unlikely to raise interest rates soon. Survey data on Monday showed factories in the euro zone had their worst month in almost six years in March, while economic data in the United States offered more hope. Data on Tuesday, however, showed that new orders for key U.S.-made capital goods unexpectedly fell in February and shipments were unchanged, while data for January was revised slightly higher. The single currency was last $1.1194 against the dollar, after earlier dipping to $1.1181, the lowest since March 7. The euro is nearing the $1.1174 level, which if broken would send the

	currency to its weakest levels since June 2017. Some technical indicators suggest the euro may be nearing the end of its downturn, and that it should find support soon if it does not drop below the $1.1185-$1.1175 region. Australia's dollar shed 0.69% after the Australian government downgraded its growth forecasts but said it expected the economy to extend its enviable recession-free run of growth into a third decade.
GOLD	Gold firmed on Tuesday, recovering from a near four-week low, as U.S. stock markets retreated, but a strong dollar and robust economic data from the U.S. and China eased fears of a global slowdown, capping bullion's advance. Spot gold was up 0.3 percent at $1,291.03 per ounce as of 1:33 p.m. EDT (1733 GMT), having touched its lowest level since March 7 at $1,284.76 earlier. U.S. gold futures settled 0.1 percent higher at $1,295.40 an ounce. U.S. stocks pulled back after a three-day surge, while investors looked for more signs of strength in the economy in the wake of growth worries, after a surprise rebound in China's manufacturing data and better-than-expected U.S. numbers pushed the S&amp;P 500 to near six-month highs. Bullion is seen as a hedge against political and economic uncertainty. Also, the dollar rose to a three-week high against a basket of currencies, making gold expensive for holders of other currencies. New orders for key U.S.-made capital goods slipped in February and shipments were unchanged, but data for January was revised slightly higher, which could support views that the manufacturing sector was stabilizing. This comes after U.S. manufacturing activity rebounded a bit more than expected in March, according to an industry report released on Monday. Meanwhile, International Monetary Fund Managing Director Christine Lagarde said while global growth has lost momentum amid rising trade tensions and tighter financial conditions, pauses in rate hikes will help boost activity in the second half of 2019. Investors are also keeping a close watch on Sino-U.S. trade negotiations, set to resume later this week in Washington with a Chinese delegation led by Vice Premier Liu He. Holdings in the world's largest gold-backed exchange-traded fund, SPDR Gold Trust, fell 1.5 percent on Monday, their biggest one-day percentage decline in a month. Among other precious metals, spot palladium was up 1 percent at $1,433.50 an ounce. Silver slipped 0.1 percent to $15.09 per ounce after touching its lowest level since late December at $14.90, while platinum dipped 0.2 percent to $845.67.
OIL	Oil prices on Tuesday hit their highest level so far in 2019, with Brent crude approaching $70 a barrel, on the prospect that more sanctions against Iran and further Venezuelan disruptions could deepen an OPEC-led supply cut. Brent futures reached a session peak at $69.51 a barrel, the highest since Nov. 13. The global benchmark rose 36 cents, or 0.52 percent, to settle at $69.37 a barrel. U.S. West Texas Intermediate (WTI) crude rose 99 cents, or 1.61 percent, to settle at $62.58 a barrel, after touching $62.72, its highest level since Nov. 7. The United States is considering more sanctions against Iran, the fourth-largest producer in the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), an official said. Meanwhile, a crude terminal in Venezuela, also under U.S. sanctions, halted operations again due to power problems. However, Venezuela stabilized exports in March after shipments fell about 40 percent in February from January. But further supply losses from Iran and Venezuela could widen an OPEC-led production cut. OPEC supply hit a four-year low in March, a Reuters survey found, due to the involuntary declines and as top exporter Saudi Arabia cut more than agreed. Russia, the biggest non-OPEC producer in the so-called OPEC+ group, has yet to reach its production-cutting target. Russian oil output declined to 11.3 million barrels per day (bpd) last month, energy ministry data showed. While the country's output was down by around 112,000 bpd from the October 2018 level, Russia has pledged to cut output by 228,000 bpd from that level. Investors will watch weekly U.S. crude inventory data. Analysts in a Reuters poll estimated that stocks fell 400,000 barrels last week.

Data from industry group the American Petroleum Institute is due out at 4:30 p.m. EDT (2030 GMT). U.S. government data will be released on Wednesday.

Oil's pattern on the price charts could lead to further gains. Brent is just below the 200-day moving average and a move above this mark would boost technical support, said Olivier Jakob, analyst at Petromatrix.

Investors have worried for months that weak global economic data could mean slowing slow demand for crude, but healthier data this week from the United States and China eased concerns about the economy and bolstered prices. Figures showed a rebound in U.S. factory activity in March and a return to growth in Chinese manufacturing.
