Daily Outlook
GLOBAL MARKETS & ECONOMIES | WEEKLY ECONOMIC INDICATORS | CURRENCIES | PRECIOUS METAL | O I L |

GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul> <li>China's central bank has no intent to tighten or relax monetary policy, a vice governor said on Thursday, as the market debates how much more support Beijing will give the economy after surprisingly resilient data was released last week.</li> <li>The Bank of Japan put a time frame on its forward guidance for the first time by telling investors that it would keep interest rates at super-low levels for at least one more year, in a move to dispel any doubt over its commitment to ultra-loose policies.</li> <li>British retail sales rose for the first time in five months in April, a leading employers' group said on Thursday, adding to signs that consumers have recovered their appetite for spending even as the country's Brexit impasse drags on.</li> <li>British Prime Minister Theresa May's government wants to get her thrice-defeated Brexit deal approved by parliament before the new European parliament opens in July, her de-facto deputy, David Lidington, said on Thursday.</li> <li>New orders for U.Smade capital goods increased by the most in eight months in March, but a drop in shipments suggested business spending on equipment slowed down in the first quarter. Other data on Thursday showed the number of Americans filing claims for unemployment benefits recorded its biggest increase in 19 months last week. The trend in jobless claims, however, remains consistent with a strong labor market.</li> </ul>
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul> <li>The dollar rose to almost a two-year high against the euro on Thursday on an upbeat U.S. capital goods report, while world equities slid as weak economic data from South Korea and a profit warning from 3M Co renewed concerns about global growth.</li> <li>New orders for U.Smade capital goods increased by the most in eight months in March, which combined with worries about the economic health of the euro zone knocked the single currency to its lowest against the greenback since May 2017.</li> <li>Chinese officials also warned of protracted pressure on economic growth, casting a shadow over hopes for a sustained recovery in the world's second-biggest economy.</li> </ul>
FOREX	The dollar climbed to a near two-year high against the euro on Thursday, as upbeat U.S. data fed demand for the greenback and traders awaited the release on Friday of U.S. gross domestic product data for the first quarter of 2019. The euro fell 0.18% to $1.1132, its lowest since May 2017.  Data on Thursday showed new orders for U.Smade capital goods increased by the most in eight months in March.  The euro, meanwhile, has been hounded by worries about the health of the euro zone economy.  Earlier this year, the U.S. Federal Reserve pulled back on expected interest rate hikes amid signs of slowing economic growth. Investors will watch the release on Friday of U.S. gross domestic product data for the first three months of 2019 for signs of whether the United States remains stronger than other leading economies.  On Thursday, the dollar fell 0.48% against the Japanese yen after the Bank of Japan put a time frame on its forward guidance for the first time by telling investors that it would keep interest rates at super-low levels for at least one more year.  The Swedish crown plummeted to a 17-year low after the country's central bank delayed its next interest rate hike.  The British pound was stuck near $1.29 a 10-week low after reports Prime Minister's Theresa May's talks with the opposition Labour Party over Britain's exit from the European Union, or Brexit, had run into the sand.
GOLD	Gold rose to its highest in more than a week on Thursday, supported by a slight retreat in the dollar and a pullback in global equities as demand for riskier assets cooled. Spot gold was up 0.2 percent at $1,276.93 per ounce as of 1:38 p.m. EDT (1738 GMT) after hitting $1,282.38, the highest since April 16. U.S. gold futures settled unchanged at $1,279.70 an ounce.

The dollar index eased after advancing to a near 2-year high earlier in the session. A slide in U.S. equities added to losses in global stock markets, which have been weighed by a surprise deterioration in German and South Korean economic data that revived concerns of a global downturn

Bullion fell below the psychologically significant $1,300-per-ounce mark and other key support levels, including the 100-day and 50-day moving averages, mostly due to dollar strength and better-than-expected economic readings recently from both the United States and China.

Meanwhile, holdings of SPDR Gold Trust, the world's largest gold-backed exchange-traded fund, dipped 0.2 percent to its lowest since Oct. 19, at 747.87 tonnes on Wednesday.

Investors are awaiting U.S. gross domestic product data due on Friday, with the economy forecast to have grown by 2.1 percent in the first quarter.

Among other metals, silver was slightly lower at $14.91 per ounce, while platinum rose 0.8 percent to $885.78. Palladium fell 0.1 percent to $1,416.01 per ounce.

Oil prices eased after Brent touched $75 per barrel on Thursday for the first time in nearly six months on the suspension of some Russian crude exports to Europe as investors second-guessed the market's ability to rally further.

Brent crude futures settled at $74.35, losing 22 cents, or 0.30 percent, after rallying for most of the day to a high of $75.60, the strongest since Oct. 31. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude settled at $65.21 a barrel, falling 68 cents, or 1.03 percent, after hitting a session high of $66.28.

Poland and Germany suspended imports of Russian crude via the Druzhba pipeline, citing contamination. The pipeline can ship up to 1 million barrels per day, or 1 percent of global crude demand, and about 700,000 bpd of flow was suspended, according to trading sources and Reuters calculations.

Russia, the world's second-largest crude exporter, said it planned to start pumping clean fuel to Europe through the pipeline on April 29.

U.S. crude inventories last week rose 5.5 million barrels to their highest since October 2017 at 460.6 million barrels, as stocks at the Cushing, Oklahoma, delivery hub for WTI rose 463,000 barrels, government data showed on Wednesday.

The United States this week said it would end all exemptions for buyers of Iranian oil. OPEC's third-largest producer has been under U.S. sanctions for more than six months, but several major buyers, including China and India, were given temporary exemptions until this week. Beginning in May, those countries have to halt oil imports from Tehran or face sanctions.

The decision follows supply cuts by the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries and non-member producers, including Russia, since the start of the year aimed at propping up oil prices.

Still, Brian Hook, U.S. special representative for Iran and senior policy adviser to the secretary of state, said on Thursday "there is plenty of supply in the market to ease that transition and maintain stable prices".

Consultancy Rystad Energy said Saudi Arabia and its main allies could replace lost Iranian oil. The cuts led by OPEC are in part a response to ballooning U.S. crude production, currently at a record 12.2 million bpd, making the United States the world's biggest producer.
