GLOBAL ECONOMIES	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The United States and China are nearing a trade deal that would roll back a portion of the $250 billion in U.S. tariffs on Chinese goods, Politico reported on Wednesday after U.S. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said the two countries completed "productive" talks in Beijing. German manufacturing activity shrank for a fourth month running in April, a survey showed on Thursday, suggesting factories held back overall growth in Europe's largest economy at the beginning of the second quarter of the year. German retail sales fell by 0.2 percent on the month in March, due largely to sharp drops in sales of food, drink and tobacco, data showed on Thursday. Bank of England Governor Mark Carney said on Thursday investors were underestimating how much interest rates could rise, even as the British central bank kept borrowing costs on hold due to Brexit uncertainty. Britain's construction sector returned to growth last month thanks to a pick-up in housebuilding, though the outlook is less certain due to a sharp fall in new orders, an industry survey showed on Thursday. English voters are expected to use local government elections on Thursday to punish Prime Minister Theresa May's Conservative Party over its failure to deliver Brexit, revealing a divided and dissatisfied electorate. U.S. worker productivity increased at its fastest pace in more than four years in the first quarter, depressing labor costs and suggesting inflation could remain benign for a while.
GLOBAL MARKETS	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Global equity markets declined for a second straight day on Thursday while the dollar and bond yields rose after comments from Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell caused investors to lower expectations for a rate cut by the U.S. central bank this year. As earnings season winds down and with the majority of profit reports in the rear mirror, investor focus will shift back to macro concerns such as economic data and trade issues, including Friday's U.S. employment report.
FOREX	The dollar gained against most currencies on Thursday as traders pared their bets of an interest rate cut from the Federal Reserve following Fed Chairman Jerome Powell's comment about U.S. inflation. The pound slipped after the Bank of England lifted its growth forecasts but warned that Brexit continued to cloud the outlook for monetary policy. Trading volume picked up as some European markets reopened after closing for May Day on Wednesday. Chinese and Japanese markets will remain shut for domestic holidays the rest of the week. The greenback proved resilient since Powell said at a news conference on Wednesday that the factors dragging on inflation might be "transitory" and he saw no case for a rate move in either direction. Interest rate futures implied traders see about a 49% chance the Fed would lower key lending rates at year-end, down from 61% late on Wednesday, according to CME Group's FedWatch program. In late U.S. trading, an index that tracks the greenback against the euro, yen, sterling and three other currencies was up 0.215% at 97.824. A solid U.S. payrolls report due at 8:30 a.m. ET (1230 GMT) on Friday would bolster the notion the world's biggest economy is track for its longest expansion ever this summer, supporting the dollar, analysts said. Analysts polled by Reuters forecast U.S. employers likely added 185,000 workers in April, a tad fewer than March, and the unemployment rate likely held at 3.8% last month. The greenback erased initial losses against the euro, which rose earlier after German retail sales contracted by less than expected while PMI surveys from Germany to Spain were broadly within expectations. The single currency was 0.18% lower at $1.1175 and down 0.1% at 124.605 yen.

	Meanwhile, sterling retreated from a two-week high against the dollar as the BOE's decision to leave rates unchanged at 0.75% reinforced the view that UK policymakers are in no hurry to raise rates amid concerns about ongoing Brexit negotiations. The pound was down 0.15% at $1.3028, while the euro was up 0.06% at 85.8 pence.
GOLD	Gold prices slumped to an over four-month low on Thursday after the U.S. Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) axed any hopes for a rate cut in the near term, subduing demand for the non-interest bearing bullion. Spot gold was down 0.5 percent at $1,270.22 per ounce as of 1:42 pm EDT (1742 GMT), after touching its lowest since end-December 2018 at $1,265.85 earlier in the session. U.S. gold futures settled down 1 percent at $1,272 an ounce. The Federal Reserve kept the benchmark interest rate unchanged on Wednesday, in line with the market's expectations. However, market participants were taken by surprise when the central bank emphasised it saw no compelling reason to consider a rate cut any time soon, citing rising employment and economic growth. Also weighing on gold was the U.S. dollar, which gained 0.1 percent against key rivals on the Fed's comments, making gold costlier for investors holding other currencies. Higher interest rates increase the opportunity cost of holding non-yielding gold and tends to boost the U.S. dollar. Economists polled by Reuters are expecting total non-farm employment to have increased by 185,000 jobs in April. Investors are also closely monitoring the U.S.-China trade talks, anticipating a quick resolution to the year-long tit-for-tat tariff war. Any positive news from the negotiations tend to boost appetite for riskier assets, denting gold's safe-haven appeal. Elsewhere, silver fell 0.5 percent to $14.60 an ounce, holding close to a more than four-month low of $14.52 touched earlier in the session. Platinum slipped 2.1 percent to $845.49, after touching its lowest in a month. Palladium was steady at $1,352.28 per ounce, having touched its lowest since Jan. 25 at $1,309.67 in the previous session.
OIL	Oil plunged Thursday, with U.S. crude dropping almost 3 percent as the market grappled with oversupply fears as increased U.S. sanctions on Iran had more gradual impact than expected and U.S. crude oil inventories rose sharply. U.S. crude settled down $1.79 or 2.8 percent at $61.81 a barrel, heading for its biggest weekly fall since February. Brent crude futures fell $1.43 a barrel, or 2 percent to $70.75. Market sentiment became more bearish as shifting U.S. policy on Iran had less immediate impact than initially feared, analysts said. The U.S. sanctions on Iran intensified this week as the Trump administration halted waivers allowing eight countries including China and Turkey to continue to do business with Iran. The roll-back of the waivers did not immediately lead to supply shortages. China has complained to the United States about its Iran sanctions and Turkey said it was unable to replace Iranian imports easily, calling on Washington to review its move. Oil prices had previously been supported by the political crisis in Venezuela, thee stricter U.S. sanctions against Iran and production cuts from the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries. Any residual bullish sentiment also eroded as robust U.S. crude stockpiles indicated that the market was well supplied. Energy information supplier Genscape forecast that storage at the U.S. hub at Cushing, Oklahoma had increased 1.95 million barrels between April 26 and 30, traders said. U.S. crude stockpiles last week rose to their highest since September 2017, jumping by 9.9 million barrels to 470.6 million barrels as production hit a record high of 12.3 million barrels per day (bpd), government data showed. In Eastern Europe, countries have secured supplies to offset shipments halted due to contamination. Poland's energy ministry said it had decided to release mandatory oil reserves following the suspension of contaminated oil deliveries from Russia in April, to secure regular output at local refineries. Belarus said on Thursday that clean oil had reached it via the Druzhba pipeline from Russia. The outage has helped push up North Sea crude differentials.

Despite the desire of many OPEC members to continue supply cuts, the group may eventually be forced into action to meet demand in a market that has seen prices rise more than 30 percent this year.
Russia has sent signals about potentially increasing output. In April, the country's oil output fell month-on-month, but stayed above OPEC quotas.
