

Daily Outlook

GLOBAL STOCK INDEX

DJIA

U.S. stocks climbed on Monday, helped by gains in Apple, Microsoft and Merck & Co, as investors set aside worries about the U.S.-China trade war.

Shares of Apple Inc rose 2.4% after Chief Executive Officer Tim Cook told a German daily that sales of the company's newest iPhones were off to a strong start, while JP Morgan raised its forecast for shipment volumes. Apple is struggling to reverse shrinking iPhone sales amid tepid global demand for smartphones.

Also helped by a 0.9% rise in Microsoft Corp, the S&P 500 technology index .SPLRCT added 1.0%, leading other sectors.

Sentiment on Wall Street got an additional boost after White House trade adviser Peter Navarro dismissed reports that the Trump administration was considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges as "fake news."

Concerns related to those reports had sent the S&P 500 and Nasdaq to a more than three-week low on Friday.

U.S.-listed shares of Chinese firms Alibaba Group Holding Ltd and Baidu Inc rose 0.8% and 1.5%, respectively.

The next round of high-stakes trade talks between the world's two largest economies is scheduled for October.

Wall Street's main indexes are on course to end September with the weakest quarterly performance so far this year, rattled by a host of factors including an escalation in U.S.-China trade tensions, the inversion of an important part of the U.S. yield curve and political turmoil in Washington.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 0.36% to end at 26,916.83 points, while the S&P 500 gained 0.50% to 2,976.73.

The Nasdaq Composite added 0.75% to 7,999.34.

For the month, the S&P 500 rose 1.7%, the Dow added 2.1% and the Nasdaq gained 0.5%.

For the third quarter, the S&P 500 and Dow moved up 1.2%, while the Nasdaq dipped 0.1%.

Merck & Co Inc gained 1.5% as it presented promising data for its Lynparza cancer drug, which it developed in partnership with Britain's AstraZeneca PLC.

Nikkei

Japan's Nikkei average had the best month in a year although it fell on Monday after news that the U.S. administration is considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. exchanges.

Analysts said Japanese shares are generally more sensitive to China's economic performance than U.S. counterparts.

The benchmark Nikkei average declined 0.6% to 21,755.84, its lowest close in 2-1/2 weeks. For the month, however, it gained 5.1% to mark its best monthly performance since September 2018.

The broader Topix index dipped 1.0% to 1,587.80, with all but one of its 33 subindexes trading in negative territory. It also advanced 5.0% in September, making it the best month in nearly two years.

Risk assets took a hit in U.S. trade on Friday following news that the administration of President Donald Trump is considering new financial pressure tactics on China, including the possibility of delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges.

The report knocked Chinese shares listed on U.S. exchanges, with Alibaba Group Holding slumping 5.2% on Friday.

Japan's SoftBank Group, which is Alibaba's largest shareholders, shed 2.6% on the news and dragged down the benchmark Nikkei.

On Tokyo's bourse, electric and gas, air transport and mining were the worst three performers of the Topix's subindexes, down 3.1%, 2.6% and 2.6% respectively.

Kospi

South Korean shares closed higher on Monday on better-than-expected China data and as investors shrugged off news that Washington was considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges. The Korean won and the benchmark bond yield rose.

President Donald Trump's administration is considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges, three sources briefed on the matter said on Friday, in what would be a radical escalation of U.S.-China trade tensions.

It seems like investors saw the news from the United States as a tactic to hold a dominant position in the trade talks with China (rather than a real threat), said Ryoo Yong-seok, an analyst at KB Securities.

China's September factory activity survey, slightly higher than market consensus, was also positive for domestic markets, Ryoo added.

Shares of Samsung Electronics closed up 1.34% after the company said it has secured a deal to provide 5G equipment for Japan's KDDI.

As a demand for 5G mobile network increases, Samsung Electronics is expected to win more orders, particularly with its rival Huawei Technologies under pressure of U.S. sanctions, said Lee Chang-min, an analyst at KB Securities.

 The Seoul stock market's main KOSPI ended up 13.12 points, or 0.64%, at 2,063.05.
 The benchmark index gained 4.84% for the month, erasing some of its losses in July and August. However, the index shrank 3.17% on a quarterly basis, posting a second consecutive quarter of losses.

Hang Seng & Shanghai

➤ Hong Kong shares firmed on Monday, driven by AB InBev's Asia-Pacific unit which rallied on its debut, but posted their worst quarter in four years as local unrest and Sino-U.S. tariff war show no signs of easing. The Hang Seng index closed 0.5% higher at 26,092.27 points. The benchmark accumulated losses of 8.6% over the past three months, marking its worst quarterly fall since the third quarter of 2015. The Hang Seng China Enterprises index rose 0.5% on Monday, but was down 6.3% quarter-on-quarter, its worst quarterly fall since the fourth quarter of 2018. The sub-index of the Hang Seng tracking energy shares rose 0.6%, the IT sector lost 0.1%, the financial sector rose 0.7% higher and the property sector gained 0.5%. AB InBev's Asia-Pacific unit, which raised about $5 billion after relaunching its IPO this month, rose more than 6% on its market debut in Hong Kong, easing concerns of the impact of ongoing anti-government protests on new share offerings. In a potential escalation of the trade war with Beijing, U.S. President Donald Trump's administration is considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges, three sources briefed on the matter said on Friday. Hong Kong is on edge ahead of the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic on Tuesday, after police fired water cannon, tear gas and rubber bullets at protesters who set fires and threw petrol bombs over the weekend. Local financial markets will be shut on Oct. 2 for the National Day holiday and will re-open on Oct. 3, Wednesday.

➤ Stocks in mainland China fell to their lowest in almost a month on Monday on news that the United States may curb Chinese companies' access to U.S. capital markets, stoking fears of a major escalation in their year-long trade war.

At close, the Shanghai Composite index was down 0.9% at 2,905.19, its lowest level since Sept. 2, while the blue-chip CSI300 index was down 1%. CSI300's financial sector sub-index fell 1.3%, the consumer staples sector slid 1%, the real estate index lost 0.1%, and the healthcare sub-index was down 0.4%. The smaller Shenzhen index lost 1.1%, and the start-up board ChiNext Composite index was weaker by 1.2%. President Donald Trump's administration is considering delisting Chinese companies from U.S. stock exchanges, three sources briefed on the matter said on Friday. The move would be part of a broader effort to limit U.S. investment in Chinese companies, two sources said. One source said it was motivated by the Trump administration's growing security concerns about the companies' activities. "The U.S. government directly intervening in pension funds, investment in China would impact the trend of overseas capital (increasingly) allocating renminbi assets, but that would also damage the long term interest of the U.S. investor and capital markets," Citic Securities' analysts wrote in a note on Monday. Nasdaq Inc is cracking down on initial public offerings of small Chinese companies by tightening restrictions and slowing down their approval, according to regulatory filings, corporate executives and investment bankers. Factory activity surveys in China pointed to slight improvement in September as domestic demand picked up, but analysts believe the gains will be short-lived as the property market cools and Sino-U.S. trade tensions remain elevated. The official Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rose to 49.8 in September, slightly better than expected and advancing from 49.5 in August. But it remained below the 50-point mark that separates expansion from contraction. Mainland China's financial markets will be closed between Oct. 1 and Oct. 7 for the National Day holiday.
